Retouch like a Pro with Thomas Holm

Want to improve your model images, but don't want to spend hours on fixing imperfect skin and background distractions? In this model retouch-course, Thomas Holm shares exactly the techniques that will help you use Photoshop to bring out the best in your model images easily and in a structured way. He explains how to remove distractions from the background of an image, as well as unwanted skin blemishes and minimise color differences. He also shows how to shape and sculpt your models, improve skin make he model stand out and many other things. To wrap up, he shows his favorite Black and White conversion, applying advanced unsharpmask and film grain.

But the course contain much more than that:

- A set of Thomas Holm's personal retouch actions, and instructions to use them.
- Eleven instructional movies. All in managable sizes with info about how the features used for retouch work and how to use them. They explain what you need to know and not all kinds of irrelevant stuff.
- Two full movies with guided instruction on retouching. It is done live and include thoughts on what should be done and why. 1.05h + 1.06h duration.
- The of Thomas Holm's high-res developed images used in the retouch instruction for you to try out the techniques on the same images.

Marius Budu is a visual artist working with photography and the human figure. He is currently based in Copenhagen, Denmark.

His stunning way of expressing the essence of the human condition has captured tens of thousands of art lovers worldwide. This has ensured him exhibitions at galleries and museums in countries like The United States, Canada, France, China, Romania, Sweden and Denmark.

Marius Budu's photographs are strong and focused, with few details supporting the clear impression of one thought or emotion. Through his unique use of light and shading, the pieces create structure and emphasize the sparse, yet vivid colors. The photographs are driven by his fascination with the human body as a raw material for art: sculptured, twisted and focused on the minute details, revealing its inherent individuality. The photography plays with the viewer's expectations of composition and motif – often portraying only ambiguous parts of the body, letting the viewer wonder or simply absorb.

Marius Budu delineates the human experience as a whole – uniting the photography's embodied honesty with visual echoes of a mind's streaming notions.
